New Teacher Series: Supporting Success for New Teachers

What Is This?

This series from The Critical Thinking Consortium (TC^2) equips new teachers for success by offering practical tools and conceptual foundations to begin the year with purpose and confidence. The series helps new teachers develop coherence in their practice by grounding instructional decisions in clear criteria, thoughtful task design, and relational classroom cultures.

What's The Focus?

The course introduces the core architecture of quality thinking in accessible segments:

- what it means to grow a community of thinkers
- how to design meaningful opportunities for thinking
- how to strengthen thinking competencies, and
- how to use guidance to move learning forward

Each component is unpacked through real classroom examples and ready-to-use planning tools that help teachers immediately translate ideas into actions.

How Is This Different?

- This research-informed series builds critical thinking capacity in early-career teachers to complement school district initiatives and goals
- Online sessions and customizable options provide equitable access to quality professional learning
