Leadership Development Program

What Is This?

System improvement efforts are far more likely to have significant and sustained impact when there is a cohesive approach to building capacity across different areas of the organization or district and among all levels of leadership. TC² leadership development opportunities leverage individual and team commitments to critically examine structures and practices that support or inadvertently undermine the important goals of an organization or district.

TC² leadership development learning helps systems leaders:

- Develop data literacy skills that enhance school planning processes
- Lead system goal setting and improvement plans with intentionality and purpose
- Examine, evaluate and refine education structures and practices using a critical inquiry process

What's The Focus?

TC² leadership learning opportunities can be customized to support your needs and goals, and can include:

- Co-constructing an overarching critical inquiry question to guide the learning
- Closely examining existing data and interrogating patterns that reveal where inequity lives in current structures and practices
- Identifying key leadership moves to drive forward the organization or district's goals and vision in focused, feasible, intentional and systematic ways
- Selecting high-leverage strategies that advance multiple priorities simultaneously
- Creating structures, processes, and tools to aggregate individual leader's observations of progress and support thoughtful and impactful monitoring of the leadership actions
